The course materials are a bit long especially for the required reading part. Nevertheless, Professor Wu explained them short and clear with examples during classes so it's fine in general.

I feel like the professor is spending too much time to introduce the topic in the beginning of each lecture, which made her a bit running out of time to talk about all of her slides in the ppt.

I liked the idea of required readings. May be some little quizzes about their content should be introduced. It would help to overall understand i assume.

I liked the idea of active class discussions. This is a good method of presenting info. But i think since politics is pretty difficult, it would be better if the course had more videos or commonly known examples.

All in all, i did not really study for this subject besides the days of lectures. Would be great if some additional tasks were introduced

Managing time more suitable can be better. In the first part of you class, you usually tell a lot about the topic, which caused you can only finish a small part of your PPT in the first an hour and need to rush the rest PPT in the final hour.

I agree that having presentations and assessment is more useful than taking exam as this course is more related to different political issues happening, which explaining and doing discussion with examples is rather useful than just simply examine different theories and terms in exam.

請表達你對學科的意見。

I think that this course was very difficult for me since the material is difficult for me to read and understand. This is my first time really understanding what politics is and I hope that there would be a more easy way to comprehend the materials since I don ' t really find a big interest in politics even if we need it in our lives. The required reading is sometimes even more difficult since it takes me hours to read and comprehend it.

Personally, I am not that interested in political science, but there are some lectures that I found interesting in this course, the professor was nice and knowledgeable, explain things clearly and I do enjoy her class. But at the very beginning, like the first or two lectures, she spoke rather soft without a mic, it became so much better after she decided to use mic and I can focus more. I do think she should continue using mic so that it would be even easier to grab student ' s attention and I hope she continues with her great teaching
